

LA FOLLETTE IS NOT HEARD OF

Makes No Mention Of The Recent Primary Election--Cannot Afford To Be Silent.

PARTY IS REUNITED, ALTHOUGH IT

Is Not Sweeping Victory For Either Of The Old Factions--Review Of Candidates Given For Benefit Of Readers.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Sept. 7.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, who suffered a personal defeat in the primary election Tuesday, when his choice for the nomination for governor on the republican ticket was defeated by Governor James O. Davidson by more than 50,000 plurality, will not "sulk in his tent" during the campaign this fall, but will join the procession in favor of the election of the entire republican ticket. When early returns seemed to indicate the defeat of the entire La Follette state slate there was strong belief that La Follette would refuse to peep until after election and might by his silence and quiet working exert influence for the defeat of the party nominations. Later figures, however, show that at least two members of the La Follette slate, Senator James A. Frear and Assemblyman A. H. Dahl, were nominated. In fact there was not one out-and-out stalwart nominated, unless the official count overturns the present situation with reference to the nomination for secretary of state and show that William H. Froelich, has the nomination. Were La Follette to sulk now, he would have to turn against his leader in the senate, Frear, and his leader in the assembly, Dahl, who are still powerful influences in the La Follette organization. Three days after the primaries it is gawking that the anti-La Follette faction, called stalwarts, has only the comfort of having slapped La Follette by defeating his personal choice for governor, but this was accomplished by the nomination of Governor Davidson, for fifteen years an advocate of the so-called La Follette principles. About all the stalwarts are claiming out of the recent primary election is a personal defeat of La Follette and an effective clearing up of title to credentials of membership in the regular and true republicanism party. An according to such old stalwarts as Senator Spooner, Judge E. W. Keyes, and James Monahan, this is enough. They are even so pleased with the result as to declare their approval of the La Follette primary election, against which they struggled for nearly a decade. Senator Spooner says the law can be improved and that it is obviously expensive to candidates. Senator La Follette, likewise, sees room for improvement, but upon this point of agreement the senators are not expected to shake hands or weep upon each other's bosoms.

The republican state ticket in Wisconsin surely bears the La Follette brand, although it was not what the junior senator solicited it to be when he held his secret state-making conference in Chicago last October. While official figures may change possibly the result on the secretary of state and commissioner of insurance, the ticket will with most probability be as follows:

Governor—James O. Davidson. La Follette made in two legislative sessions, made state treasurer twice by the La Follette faction in state conventions, nominated for lieutenant governor twice by the personal influence of La Follette and finally made governor upon the resignation of La Follette.

Lieutenant governor—W. D. Connor. La Follette's state chairman and campaign manager, in the campaign of two years ago.

Secretary of state—James A. Frear. La Follette leader in two sessions of the assembly and one session of the state senate.

State treasurer—Andrew H. Dahl. La Follette slate choice for that nomination and La Follette leader in the last two sessions of the legislative assembly.

Commissioner of Insurance—Thos. M. Purcell. La Follette's appointee as state treasurer when La Follette ousted J. J. Kempf from that office. La Follette's statistical agent in the accounting of the books of the railroad corporations and a most faithful La Follette factional worker in many state contests.

Attorney general—Frank L. Gilbert. A La Follette chosen district attorney of Dane county, whose greatest adverse criticism was made when he is alleged to have "framed up" a contest for two in the La Follette process of fixing up the state convention of two years ago.

Should the official count show the nomination of Froelich for secretary of state and George D. Beedle for commissioner of insurance, it will show the nomination of one who stood with Davidson in the assembly for La Follette principles; before La Follette was large in state politics, and of one for the insurance office who voted and worked in the last two legislatures for the passage of every La Follette measure.

The surprising thing about this ticket, after all, is that it furnishes an avenue wide enough for the stalwarts to come in and make the party united and harmonious, but they are not only satisfied, but jubilant, and that La Follette will hold back seems beyond the range of possibility even for this peculiar man.

HARVARD CONFIDENT OF VICTORY OVER CAMBRIDGE

But Betting On International Boat Race To Be Pulled On Thames Course Tomorrow, Favors English.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
London, Sept. 7.—Great interest is manifested in London in the international boat race between the crews of Harvard and Cambridge universities, which will take place tomorrow over the historic Thames course from Mortlake to Putney. Ever since the arrival of the Harvard crew in England the papers here have devoted columns to the work of the two crews, the betting is at its height, and though the odds naturally favor Cambridge, it seems to be the general opinion that there will be a grand struggle. In speaking of the event today a representative of the Harvard crew said: "The Harvard men are in excellent condition and we are confident of victory tomorrow. While we naturally regret that Glass will not be able to row, we regard Morgan as a satisfactory substitute. We are entirely satisfied with the course and with the arrangements that have been made." The royal family will be represented, however, and it is safe to say that there will be no more interested spectators among the thousands who will line the banks of the Thames than Prince Edward of Wales, who has taken the liveliest interest in the Harvard crew ever since its arrival here. It is believed that if the eight from the other side of the Atlantic loses the race there will be a young scion of royalty minus some pocket money, though this is a matter of which the young prince refuses to speak.

Many high British officials have accepted invitations to attend the race, and Ambassador Reid and all the attaches of the American embassy will be present. It is the evident intention of the English promoters of the contest to make it an international rather than a merely athletic event in the hope of thereby fostering the friendly rivalry of the two countries.

The Cambridge oarsmen are a strong, wiry crew with plenty of experience and a good command of watermanship. The striking difference between the Harvard and Cambridge crews is that the Cambridge oarsmen catch much harder and at the finish.

The members of the two crews, their positions and weights, follow: Harvard: bow, B. M. Tappan, 169; 2, S. W. Fish, 165; 3, P. W. Flint, 166; 4, C. H. Morgan, Jr., 157; 5, J. Richardson, 133; 6, R. L. Bacon, 137; 7, D. A. Newhall, 132; stroke, O. D. Filley, 165; cox, Blagden, 104.

Cambridge: bow, Close Smith, 149; 2, J. H. F. Benham, 155; 3, H. M. Goldsmith, 169; 4, M. Donaldson, 185; 5, J. Baynes, 193; 6, R. V. Powell, 169; 7, B. C. Johnstone, 173; stroke, D. C. R. Stuart, 150; cox, Scott, 125.

The Cambridge crew is practically the same as that which defeated Oxford in April, while the Harvard crew, with the exception of the substitute for Glass, is the same as that which was victorious over Yale at New London, Conn., last June.

MISSING BALLOONIST WILL BE EAGERLY COUGHT FOR

Oconto And The Entire District Is Searching For Man Blown Out Over Green Bay.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 7.—Thousands of people are using railway trains, tugs, sailboats and other means of conveyance, and telegraph and telephone in the search and chase for William Mattersay, the Chicago aeronaut, who floated away after ascending in a broken airship at Oconto Thursday. From Green Bay to Sault Ste. Marie people report having seen a speck in the sky which is believed by them to be the missing air-sailor. At Sturgeon Bay at noon it is claimed that Mattersay was seen with his balloon high up in the air, with him waving a white flag, and headed eastward. It is supposed if the story is true Mattersay drifted northeast all night and the change of wind sent him south and east this morning. The Oconto fair, from which he started, is practically deserted today, everybody there being on Green Bay beach looking into the sky. Lifeboats and tugs are ready for any moment word is received to make a rescue. Many believe Mattersay is drowned in Green Bay or Lake Michigan, which is twenty miles east of the bay. Every bit of clothing found on the beach or inland has been picked up in an effort today to identify it as part of Mattersay's balloon or clothes. The business in country stores is suspended at Oconto and many small towns, and factories are short-handed, so great is the excitement.

ments in order to have a good exhibition, and it now only remains for the good people of the different towns to contribute their animals, fruits, vegetables, implements and specimens of mechanical skill to make it such a show as all will feel proud of. There is hardly a family in the county that has not in its possession some article that would add to the interest and novelty of such a fair, some fine young calf, sheep or goat, an extraordinary growth of vegetables, or a specimen of handicraft that is worth showing. Every mechanic and artisan ought to feel as much interest in the success of such an enterprise as the farmers themselves, because they can avail themselves of the opportunity presented to show such articles as exhibit their skill in the departments in which they are engaged. And every business and professional man ought to encourage these fairs, because they tend to enrich and develop the resources of the country and that helps them. After so much rain we think the weather must be propitious, and we confidently look for a large attendance of the intelligent people of the county next week to see and be seen. Senator Howe, who has proved such a faithful exponent in the Senate of the political principles which our people cherish, will be present and address them.

FOR SUPPRESSION
OF A PHONOGRAPH

Dwellers in Flats on South Main Street Are Circulating a Petition.

Parties residing in the flats near the corner of Court and Main streets are circulating a petition of protest

five-cent theatre of the phonograph
which has been sending out a succession of sound waves afternoon and evening for the edification and entertainment of the passers-by. They claim that the machine is run almost continuously until a late hour at night and that the din interferes with peaceful slumber and is a nuisance.
Therefore they ask the authorities
to suppress the same.

VERSATILE PRESS
AGENT TELLS TALES

Out of School—Lee Kugel, Representing "The Greater Love" an Interesting Conversationalist.

Lee Kugel, former New York newspaper man and at present one of the most brilliant advance men in the theatrical profession, was a pleasant caller at the Gazette office yesterday.
There is scarcely a city of above 10,000 population in the union which has not been visited by him in his travels, hardly a city editor who has not been willingly or unwillingly intimidated by his always clever, and sometimes astounding expedients for "creating" news that will catch the public's eye and incidentally advertise
the attraction he is heading. While Ellie Shannon, booked for Tacoma,
was on her way to Seattle, Kugel provided a tragic death for a mythical Indian squaw in Dakota and had the star adopt her posthumously. Pictures of the infant were secured in "curio stores and eagerly snapped up by the newspapers. Before Miss Shannon should reach Tacoma it became necessary on the eve of her departure from Seattle to get rid of the papoose that never was and the press agent proceeded to contrive a series of fake telegram detailing the arrest of Miss Shannon by the Indian agent, her confinement in jail, and so on. He advertised for 100 red-headed girls in Minneapolis; he had one of the addresses and twenty helpers clean two blocks of one of Boston's busiest and dirtiest thoroughfares; he started the management of the Chicago cable cars to restrain those from running by the theatre where one of his unusually sensitive stars was playing; he made an original translation from the Greek of one of the Sappho odes and attributed it to another. Long ago the motto "Never let your pipe go out," became the shibboleth of the profession, and Kugel is one of its leading exponents.

Kugel can tell how "phony" telegrams are manufactured with the aid of a piece of tissue paper, a sponge,
and a crumple, but this is only one aspect of his calling. He knows of every plank, forward, and retrograde movement in the theatrical war which is raging between the "Independents," headed by the Shuberts, under whom he is retained, and the so-called
"trust," headed by Klaw & Branger.

The "trust," he avers, has been successful in preventing all the theatres
of Wisconsin save those at Janesville, Madison, and Milwaukee from booking any of the Sappho stars, such as Margaret Anglin, Henry E. Dixey, E. H.
Sothern and Julia Marlowe, and fifty or more others. The trust likewise holds the state of Michigan in its grasp, all but four cities being in line. But a chorus of first-class bookings is going up from such towns as Marquette and Battle Creek and further victories are in sight for the "Independents."

Just now this versatile man is an enthusiast over the life of the great composer, Mozart. He knows the historical environment under which the wonderful operas were composed, the romantic circumstances connected with the production of "Don Giovanni" and "The Magic Flute." He speaks with great fervor and understanding of the composer's tragic sacrifice of his love for Aloisia to the greater love for his art. He tells of Munkasky's painting of the scene at Mozart's death-bed and the singing of the requiem he composed—a canvas hanging in the Metro olean museum, New York and then he introduces the subject uppermost in his mind, the production of "The Greater Love" with Aubrey Boucicault (pronounced Boos-ee-ko) in the stellar role which is to bring here prior to the Chicago engagement. "Brancesca
de Rimini" and is well remembered here Kugel claims that his offering is something entirely new. A nine piece symphony orchestra and several puffed soloists assist in the interpretation of a historical and romantic drama of Mozart's life. The piece opened in New York and is now playing in Buffalo where it has made a great hit, according to the theatrical reviews appearing in the newspapers of that city.

The Largest Fair.
The attractions before the grand stand at the Walworth County Fair, Elkhorn, Sept. 18, 19, 20 and 21, will be complete. The grounds and buildings have been improved for the occasions of the people and the commodations of the management is to give aim of the management is to give more than simply value received, for your patronage.

The exhibits from the state agricultural college, the manual training school and the state department of North Dakota will be free and worthy of your inspection, and the floral hall
will have exhibits of unusual merit.

Afterthought.
A small boy offered the following prayer before retiring: "God bless papa and mamma, and sister Mildred, and Rosa, the cook, and Mary, the nurse. Oh, no, Lord, you needn't trouble to bless Mary, after all, 'cause
she left this morning."

CUBAN TRADE

Just at this time when a revolution is going on in Cuba, the child republic of the United States, and Uncle Sam may be called upon to step in and take a hand at straightening out affairs, it is interesting to note the amount of trade that the United States has with Cuba and the nature thereof. The Department of Commerce and Labor today make public their report on this matter and it is most interesting reading. It is as follows:

"Commerce of the United States with Cuba in the fiscal year just ended was greater than in any earlier year of the trade relations between the United States and that island. This is particularly true of exports. The imports from the island fell slightly below those of 1905, due to the fall in the price of sugar, but the exports to the islands were 25 per cent greater than in 1905, 75 per cent greater than in 1904, and about 120 per cent greater than in 1903.

"The growth in the exports to Cuba during recent years has been very rapid. The value of exports to that island had never reached the 20-million-dollar line until the year 1893, when they were 24 millions. In 1894 they were 20 millions, then during the war period they dropped as low as $4 millions, but in 1900 again crossed the 20-million line, being in that year 26 1/2 million dollars. In 1903 they again dropped to a little less than 22 millions, in 1904 27 millions, in 1905 33 millions, and in 1906, $47,763,688.

"In imports the gain is less strongly marked. Prior to 1895 the value of the imports into the United States from Cuba ranged in most years from 50 to 75 million dollars, being in 1874 $5 millions, and in 1893 73 millions. The year 1905, however, made a record slightly higher than that of 1874, the total value of imports from Cuba in 1905 being $36,304,259. In 1906, the fiscal year just ended, the value of imports into the island was $34,979,831, a slight decrease as compared with 1905.

"This fall in the value of imports from Cuba in 1906 was due solely to the fall in the price of sugar. The five articles forming the bulk of our imports from Cuba are sugar, tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes, iron ore, and bananas. Of these, the most important by far is sugar, which amounted in value in 1906 to 60 million dollars, tobacco 13 1/2 millions, cigars and bananas 1 million. Tobacco, cigars and cigarettes, and iron ore show an increase in the fiscal year 1906, and bananas show a reduction of less than half a million dollars in value in 1906, as compared with 1905, being 2,781,901,380 pounds, and the value $69,208,148, against 2,057,634,169 pounds, valued at $64,306,104, imported from the island in 1905.

"The principal articles forming the nearly 48 million dollars' worth of merchandise exported to the island were iron and steel manufactures nearly 10 million dollars, against a little over 6 millions in 1905, flour over 3 million dollars, cattle about 2 millions, lamb about 3 millions, other provisions about 3 millions, including milk valued at $665,277, lumber about 2 1/2 millions, boots and shoes a little less than 2 millions, coal a little less than 2 millions, cotton goods 1 1/2 millions, cars and carriages 1 1/2 millions, and corn 1 1/4 million dollars.

"The increase in shipments to Cuba, while visible in many articles, occurs chiefly in manufactures of iron and steel, of which the total exports to the island were $9,879,048 in 1906, against $6,164,908 in 1905."

INTEREST SHOWN

Much interest is shown throughout the United States in the Wisconsin primary. Owing to the prominent part that Senator La Follette took in the pre-primary campaign the stinging defeat administered to Leavitt is commented on by papers which voice national sentiment. La Follette is sharply criticized for his action. The Chicago Chronicle says this morning: "Senator La Follette of Wisconsin is a young man and an able man, but he is not bigger than his party. "If he shall recognize this truth as the result of last Tuesday's primaries he may reasonably count upon many years of usefulness to the nation and to the republican party. If he fails to realize it his days of ascendancy are numbered. "A good many men have undertaken to qualify the political axiom that the party is greater than the man. They have all, with one exception, been laid away in the graveyard of dead ambitions. That one exception will cease to exist when the democratic party soberly passes judgment upon the pretensions of Mr. Bryan. The decree is already made up; it needs only to be formally handed down.

"Senator La Follette may well profit by the examples of men who have thus arrogated to themselves despotic authority only to find themselves deposed and sent into political exile by those whom they essayed to rule. He himself has been on dangerous ground for some time.

"He has assumed that he is above the unwritten laws which regulate the partisan organization to which he belongs and which has done him honor.

"Professedly a republican, he has really been more of a democrat. His attitude has been critical and even hostile to republican principles and policies.

"It has frequently seemed that if it came to making a choice between William J. Bryan and most republicans Senator La Follette would give his adhesion to Bryan.

"In other words, though holding office by the grace of the republican party, Mr. La Follette has more than once come dangerously near to giving aid and comfort to the republican party's enemies. He has thus assumed to be bigger than his party because he has assumed to ignore party discipline and consistency.

"This attitude is impossible and the republicans of Wisconsin have shown Senator La Follette how impossible it is. They have taught him a lesson which, if he accepts it, will prove his political salvation; if he denies and ignores it his political undoing. They have shown him that able and energetic and patriotic though he may be, he is still not the overlord of the republicans of Wisconsin; he is not greater than the republican party.

"It rests altogether with himself whether he shall profit by the rebuff which he sustained at the recent primaries. If not he may take our word for it that the next rebuke will be thorough and final.

"A political party does not indefinitely deal tenderly with the man who essays to play the despot."

La Follette has not yet spoken as to the results of the recent primaries. Why this silence? At least he might make a few remarks on his own great personal achievements.

Senator Spooner has offered to speak on the stump for the ticket headed by Governor James Davidson. So much for harmony in the state.

The Milwaukee Free Press is urging District Attorney McGovern to run as an independent candidate, claiming the better element of the republican party did not have representation at the polls. Mr. McGovern had better take his medicine and not listen to the advice of his cracked-brained friends.

Thus far Senator La Follette has made no mention of what he thinks of the result on Tuesday last. The people, however, expressed their thoughts on the matter most strenuously.

The Madison-Janesville interurban is the next matter of importance that is to come up for consideration. It should be disposed of in two-four order, so work can be begun this fall.

Corn crops are still growing and the longer warm weather keeps up the better they will be.

Janesville has ideal weather for September and even the farmers have nothing to complain of.

Work on the New Assorting yards of the North-Western line has begun. Surveyors have started in on their work of preliminary arrangements for the location of tracks, buildings and other equipment of the new addition to Janesville.

The democrats showed but little strength on Tuesday last and doubtless will not show much more on election day.

County Clerk Lee had a nervous time Tuesday night watching election returns. With no opposition he and Treasurer Smith and Register of Deeds Welck were in hot water until the last precinct was heard from and their renomination known to be secure.

Why not repair all the sidewalks downtown now the crusade has begun?

College boys are again getting ready for their fall campaign. Football in an abbreviated form will take the place of the good old contests.

The election in Maine is the next state to be watched. This year the old question of prohibition comes up again and the true status of the parties can not be really estimated.

Vermont has settled the question of party control. The next congress will be republican. Funny that this state always shows which way the wind blows.

Harvard is confident of a victory over Cambridge in the international eight-oared shell race to be held in England.

"Senator La Follette of Wisconsin is a young man and an able man, but he is not bigger than his party.

SURVEYING FOR THE NEW YARDS

NORTH-WESTERN EMPLOYEES BEGAN WORK YESTERDAY.

DOUBLE TRACK TO THE DEPOT

Work on New Bridge Part of North-Western Railway Company's Surveyors began work yesterday afternoon—that is, preliminary to the drawing of plans for the new freight and passenger yards that the company proposes to build on the three-hundred-acre lot southeast of the city that was purchased last spring. It is understood that the rough plans were made last summer, as announced at that time in the Gazette, and now with an accurate measurement of the land and its location in respect to present yards the drawings by which the actual work will be done are to be made immediately.

Surveyors at Work Today

Two civil engineers arrived from Chicago yesterday. They made arrangements for the work and today with a corps of recruits started out from Tower YD. This is located at the southern extremity of the local yards and is the "station" from which all southbound freights are dispatched. They began surveying from there and proceeded down the main line to the company's new property. There the work of measuring the yards is now being done.

Some New Phases.

Two new phases of the projected improvements have developed since the surveyors' arrival. One is the fact that double-track will be laid from Tower YD to the new yards. The other is a question regarding the Montgomery bridge. This was built for a single track and whether the company intends to rebuild or have but a single passage over the river is a matter which cannot be answered for some time. Some railroad men are of the opinion that the company would rather stand the expense of a new bridge, though it be enormous by reason of the height and length, than take even the slightest chances of a wreck.

CHAPTER I.

"My dear madam, what you call heart does not come into the question at all."

Sir John Meredith was sitting slightly behind Lady Cantourne, leaning toward her with a somewhat stiffened replica of his former grace. But he was not looking at her, and she knew it.

They were both watching a group at the other side of the great ball room.

"Sir John Meredith on heart," said the old lady, with a depth of significance in her voice.

"And why not?"

"Yes, indeed, why not?"

Sir John smiled with that well-bred cynicism which a new school has not yet succeeded in imitating. They both belonged to the old school, these two, and their worldliness, their cynicism, their conversational attitude belonged to a bygone period. It was a cleaner period in some ways—a period devoid of slums. Ours, on the contrary, is an age of slums, wherein we all dabble to the detriment of our hands—mental, literary and theological.

Sir John moved slightly in his chair, leaning one hand on one knee. His back was very flat, his clothes were perfect, his hair was not his own, nor yet his teeth, but his manners were entirely his own. His face was eighty years old, and yet he smiled his keen society smile with the best of them. There was not a young man in the room of whom he was afraid conversationally.

"No, Lady Cantourne," he replied. "Your charming niece is heartless. She will get on."

Lady Cantourne smiled and drew the glove farther up her stout and motherly right arm.

"She will get on," she admitted. "As to the other, it is early to give an opinion."

"She has had the best of trainings," he murmured. And Lady Cantourne turned on him with a twinkling smile.

"For which?" she asked.

"Cholera," he answered, with a bow.

The object of his attention was the belle of that ball, Miss Millicent Chyne, who was beamed in a corner by a group of eager dancers anxious to insert their names in some corner of her card. She was the fashion at that time, and she probably did not know that at least half of the men crowded round because the other half were there. Nothing succeeds like the success that knows how to draw a crowd.

She received the ovation self-possession enough, but without that hauteur affected by belles of balls-in-books. She seemed to have a fresh smile for each new applicant—a smile which conveyed to each in turn the fact that she had been attempting all along to get her programme safely into his hands. A halting masculine pen will not be expected to explain how she compassed this, beyond a gentle intimation that masculine vanity had a good deal to do with her success.

"She is having an excellent time," said Sir John, weighing on the modern phrase with a subtle sarcasm. He was addicted to the use of modern phraseology, spiced with a cynicism of his own.

"Yes; I cannot help sympathizing with her a little," answered the lady.

"Nor I. It will not last."

"After all," she said, "she is my sister's child. The sympathy may only be a matter of blood. Perhaps I was like that myself once. Was I? You can tell me."

He fumbled at his lips, having reasons of his own for disliking too close a scrutiny of his face.

"That is more than probable," he answered rather indistinctly.

"Then," she said, tapping the back of his gloved hand with her fan, "we ought to be merciful to the faults of a succeeding generation. Tell me, who is that young man with the long stride who is getting himself introduced now?"

"That," answered Sir John, who prided himself upon knowing every one—knowing who they were and who they were not—"is young Osgard."

"Son of the eccentric Osgard?"

"Son of the eccentric Osgard."

"And where did he get that brown face?"

"He got that in Africa, where he has been shooting. He forms part of some one else's bag at the present moment."

"What do you mean?"

"He has been appointed a dance. Your fair niece has bagged him."

The other young men rather felt before Guy Osgard—scared, perhaps, by his long stride, and afraid that he might crush their puny toes. This enabled Miss Chyne to give him the very next dance, of which the music was commencing.

"I feel rather out of all this," said Osgard as they moved away together.

"You must excuse unaccountably."

"I see no signs of it," laughed Millicent. "You are behaving very nicely. You cannot help being larger and stronger than the others. I should say it was an advantage and something to be proud of."

"Oh, it is not that," replied Osgard; "it is a feeling of unaccountability and want of smartness among these men who look so clean and correct. Shall we dance?"

"Yes," she said, "let us dance by all means."

Here she knew her own proficiency, and in a few seconds she found that her partner was worthy of her skill.

"Where have you been?" she asked presently. "I am sure you have been away somewhere, exploring or something."

"I have only been in Africa shooting."

"Oh, how interesting! You must tell me all about it!"

She was watching the door all the while.

Presently the music ceased, and they made their way back to the spot whence he had taken her. She led the way thither by an almost imperceptible pressure of her fingers on his arm. There were several men waiting there, and one or two more entering the room and looking languidly round.

"There comes the favored one," Lady Cantourne muttered, with a veiled glance toward her companion.

"Sir John's gray eyes followed the direction of her glance."

"My bright boy," he inquired, with a wealth of sarcasm on the adjective.

"Your bright boy," she replied.

"I hope not," he said curiously.

They were watching a tall fair man in the doorway who seemed to know everybody, so slow was his progress into the room. The most remarkable thing about this man was a certain grace of movement. He seemed to be specially constructed to live in narrow, hampered places. He was about six feet, but being of slight build he moved with a certain languidness which saved him from that unwholesome usually associated with large men in a drawing room.

Such was Jack Meredith, one of the best known figures in London society. He had hitherto succeeded in moving through the mazes of that coterie, as he now moved through this room, without jarring any one.
